INTRODUCTION:

Wool, though occupying a relatively modest position among various natural fibers, holds exceptional significance due to its unique characteristics. While its usage may be seasonal, wool remains a vital fiber for an array of applications including winter clothing, suiting, floor coverings, and specialized industrial uses. Notably, wool stands alone as the sole natural fiber derived from diverse animals, making it predominantly sourced from rural landscapes and offering significant employment opportunities in rural areas. With its industry size reaching Rs. 12,444.45 crores in the fiscal year 2020-21, the woollen sector is strategically distributed between organized and decentralized segments, contributing to the country's economic fabric.
